uesday's downpour came as a relief to most Delhi'ites as the mercury dipped, and the most overjoyed were street children. "At least we can bathe in this rain," said Salman (name changed), a 13-year-old rag picker at Old Delhi railway station.

The rain is a welcome break from the oppressive heat and they can rid themselves of the dirt that sticks to their bodies as they forage through rubbish dumps to pick up scrap. "At least we can bathe in this rain as we are not allowed to bathe at any of the railway stations or public places since we look dirty. People scold us and tell us to leave the place," said Salman, adding that sometimes they are not even allowed
